Simple Summary:

Compliance with non-pharmaceutical interventions such as social distancing, wearing of masks and good hygiene can have significant impact on reducing disease transmission for diseases such as COVID-19. In the UK there are more than 350,000 horse owners, keeping their horses at a variety of different, often busy settings. This, combined with horse ownership and riding being very much a social activity, naturally brings groups of people together. The purpose of this study was to identify and evaluate the compliance of horse owners with non-pharmaceutical interventions. The results indicate that compliance of horse owners with COVID-19 rules/guidance is high when rules/guidance exists. However, just under half of respondents indicated that there were no rules/guidelines on their yards indicating that there is room for an increased contribution from the horse owning community by encouraging more yards to impose control measures where they currently do not exist.

Abstract:

In December 2019, an unusual cluster of pneumonia cases were reported in Wuhan and promptly confirmed to be caused by a new virus known as severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2) of which the disease it caused would be known as COVID-19. In March 2020, in the absence of any vaccines, and in response to the global spread of SARS-CoV-2 the UK implemented non-pharmaceutical intervention (NPI) measures in the form of a national lockdown to decelerate the spread. Compliance with NPIs can have significant impact on reducing disease transmission however there are currently no studies measuring compliance within the horse ownership world which naturally brings groups of people together during everyday caregiving activities. This article describes the reported horse owner compliance during the COVID-19 pandemic from March 2020 to December 2020 as deduced from 1036 respondents which completed an anonymous online survey between December 30th, 2020 and January 11th, 2021. Where rules/guidance did exist, there was good compliance with 92.76% of respondents indicating that they were following them. The most common rule/guidance implemented was social distancing, which was also the most common rule/guidance to be breached. Riding with others whilst at the yard (hacking or in an arena) and meeting up with non-household members (family and friends) when off the yard were also common rules/guidelines breached. Respondents who kept their horses at either DIY livery, or on a private yard were most likely to breach rules/regulations whereas respondents who kept their horses at full livery were least likely to breach rules/regulations. The results indicate that compliance of horse owners with COVID-19 rules/guidance is high when rules/guidance exists. However, just under half of respondents indicated that there were no rules/guidelines on their yards indicating that there is room for an increased contribution from the horse owning community by encouraging more yards to impose control measures where they currently do not exist.

1. Introduction

In December 2019, an unusual cluster of pneumonia cases were reported by the Chinese Centre for Disease Control (China CDC) in the city of Wuhan, Hubei province [1]. Sequencing of nucleic acid extracted from airway epithelial cells taken from the patients suffering from pneumonia quickly identified a novel betacoronavirus as the causal agent [2]. This betacoronavirus was subsequently named by the International Committee on Taxonomy of Viruses as severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2) due to the close genetic relatedness to SARS-CoV [3] and the disease which it causes was named COVID-19.

Since its discovery, SARS-CoV-2 has spread around the globe reaching pandemic status, and by January 2021 had infected 93 million people and caused more than 2 million deaths [4].

The first confirmed case of SARS-CoV-2 diagnosed in Europe was on the 24th January 2020 in France in a man who had recently returned from Wuhan [5] and on the 1st February the first two cases were reported by WHO in the United Kingdom [6].

In March 2020, the UK implemented non-pharmaceutical interventions (NPIs) control measures in the form of a national lockdown to decelerate the spread including testing, social distancing, shielding and self-isolation with the slogan "stay at home, protect the NHS, save lives". Despite easing of some restrictions in late May-June 2020 and the "downgrading" of the slogan to "stay alert, control the virus, save lives" and then to, "Hands, Face, Space" the UK has subsequently returned to further lockdowns, the first of which using a tiered approach and the most recent of which a return to national lockdown with the return of the now famous slogan "stay at home, protect the NHS, save lives".

For NPIs to have an impact on reducing disease transmission, compliance with the measures is required. Since the 23rd of March 2020 researchers from University College London (UCL) have been studying compliance across the United Kingdom via the UK COVID-19 Social Study [7]. From more than 70,000 respondents 96% reported to be complying with the majority of rules, whilst complete compliance with no bending of the rules was reported by 56% of respondents.

Rules that were reportedly broken included a) meeting up with more than the recommended number of people (24% reported breaking this rule outside and 23% reported breaking this rule indoors); b) not washing hands (45%), c) not maintaining the recommended distance from others (8%), d) not weaning face masks (7%) and e) not isolating when developing symptoms (13%) [7].

In the UK there are more than 350,000 horse owners [8] keeping their horses at a variety of different settings ranging from the home to full livery. During the COVID-19 pandemic the government issued advice for pet owners and livestock keepers on looking after the welfare of their animals during the pandemic [8]. Owners were permitted to leave their home to visit and provide care for their horse (whether at livery or on private land) and were permitted to ride or walk their horse to maintain their health and welfare. Owners were instructed to follow social distancing rules, wash hands before and after contact with any animal and make a plan for the care of their horse in case of the need to self-isolate.

This article describes the reported horse owner compliance during the COVID-19 pandemic from March 2020 to December 2020.

2. Materials and Methods

1036 respondents were recruited online via the sharing of a link to a survey to horse specific Facebook® groups. The survey was anonymous and did not collect personal data. No inclusion or exclusion criteria were set.

The survey was designed using Survey Monkey® (San Mateo, CA, USA) and consisted of eight questions of which three had one linked sub-question. Four were closed questions with multiple choice answers and seven were open for free text answers (four primary questions and three sub-questions). The survey was live between December 30th, 2020 and January 11th, 2021. For informed consent, an accompanying paragraph was included with the link to the survey which included a brief description of the purpose of the survey, notification that the survey was anonymous, and that the data would be used for academic publication. Ethical approval was granted by the Ethics Committee of University Centre Askham Bryan, certificate number 2020/SRP/182.

Demographics: Respondents were asked which country [free text] and region they lived in [free text].

Horse information: Respondents were asked how many horses they owned [free text], what breed their horses were [free text] and on what type of yard they were kept at [home, private yard, livery DIY, livery part, livery full, or other]. Respondents who selected "other" were asked for specific details.

COVID-19 Compliance with guidelines: Respondents were asked if there were any COVID-19 rules at their yard [yes/no] and who the rules were imposed by [by you (the horses' owner)/by yard manager]. If rules existed, respondents were asked to describe what rules were present [free text], whether they were complying [yes/no] and if not, to describe what they were not doing [free text]. Respondents were then asked if they were complying to the national guidelines when not undertaking horse related activities (e.g., not at their yard) [yes/no] and if not, to describe what they were not doing [free text].

Raw data was downloaded from Survey Monkey® (San Mateo, CA, USA) into Microsoft ExcelTM 2012. Free text answers were grouped manually into categories which best represented the response (Table 1) to allow for quantification of qualitative answers. Twenty-two categories were identified relating to rules imposed on yards either by owners or yard managers. Sixteen categories were identified relating to rules which were being breached whilst owners were on their yard. Eight categories were identified relating to national guidelines which were being breached when owners were not at their yard.

Table 1. Definition of categorization for free text responses

Isolation policy	Respondents not permitted to attend yard if displaying symptoms or if they had been in contact with someone with symptoms/positive test.
No touching of horses by strangers	No interaction permitted with other peoples horses.
Yard facilities shut	Toilets/tea rooms/social rooms etc. closed.
Bubbles	Requirement for respondents to only interact with members of their own bubbles.
Track and Trace App	Requirement to scan into yard using NHS
	Track and Trace App.
Windows open in inside spaces	Requirement for windows to be open in shared internal spaces.
Foot dip	People entering and existing the yard expected to dip their feet in disinfectant.
Sitting outside	People required to sit outside for matters that require sitting.
Temperature check	Respondents check their temperature is normal before entering the yard.
Sign in/out	Requirement to scan into yard using an informal register.
Negative test	Requirement to show evidence of a negative test before entering the yard.
Rules/Guidance not observed	by owners when on their yard
Not social distancing	Any breach to social distancing, even if

3. Results

3.1. Demographics

There were a total of 1036 responses of which 1019 were from Great Britain and Ireland, one from the Isle of Man, three from Jersey and 13 from the rest of the world (South Africa, Canada, Australia, Germany, New Zealand, Spain and USA) (Appendix A1).

3.1.1. Horse information

930 owners had five horses or less, 76 owners had ten horses or less, 29 owners had greater than ten horses. One participant did not answer this question.

242 (23.35%) owners kept their horses at home, 237 (22.87%) kept their horses at a private yard, 469 (45.27%) owners kept their horse at livery [333 on "Do it yourself" (DIY) livery, 78 on part livery and 58 on full livery] and 88 (8.49%) owners kept their horses at "other" accommodation [Two on assisted DIY, 14 on a farm, 44 in field, three on the yard respondent employed at, two at retirement livery, five at a riding school, one at a restaurant and 16 on mixed settings] (Figure 1).

Figure 1. Yard type on which respondents' horses are kept. Other: farm, field, yard employed at, retirement livery, riding school, restaurant, and mixed settings.

3.1.2. COVID-19 rules/guidelines on yards

554 (53.47%) respondents reported that there were rules/guidelines where they kept their horse, of which 395 (71.29%) were imposed by their yard owner and 159 (28.70%) were imposed by the horse owner themselves. Three horse owners did not answer this question. For the 395 respondents who said there were rules/guidelines imposed by their yard manager, social distancing was by far the most common, followed by restricting visits to only essential visits and visit scheduling (Figure 2; Appendix B1). For the 159 respondents who said they imposed their own rules/guidelines, social distancing was by far the most common, followed by restricting visits to only essential visits and hand cleaning (Figure 3; Appendix C1).

479 (46.23%) owners reported that there were no rules where they kept their horse. 34 respondents who stated there were no rules at their yard provided a text response. 32 owners said there was no need for rules at their yard as it was sole use (private or home settings). One respondent said although their yard had no rules they spent as little time as possible at their yard and one respondent said there are no official rules, but they apply social distancing if they see the yard owner.

961 (92.76%) owners reported that they were following rules/guidelines where they kept their horse, whilst 75 (7.23%) owners reported that they were not following the rules/guidelines where they kept their horse. Social distancing was by far the most common rule/guideline not observed, followed by owners not following rules/guidelines because they felt under their circumstances they were not required (Figure 2; Appendix D1). The yard type with the greatest number of respondents reporting that they were not following rules/guidelines were those respondents keeping horses on DIY livery yards, followed by those keeping horses on private yards and at home (Figure 4).

1000 (96.52%) owners reported that they were following the rules when they were not at their yard, whilst 3% of owners reported that they were also breaching COVID rules/guidelines when not at their yard. Eight respondents did not answer this question (Figure 5; Appendix E). The 30 respondents who reported breaching rules/guidelines when not at their yard kept their horses at livery – DIY (n=10), at private yards (n=10), at livery -part (n=5), at home (n=1) and other (n=4). There were no respondents who kept horses on full livery yards who reported breaking rules when not at their yard (Figure 6).

4. Discussion

For NPIs to have an impact on reducing disease transmission, control measures must be implemented and compliance with these rules/guidelines must be observed. This study is the first to report the compliance of horse owners to COVID-19 rules/guidance whilst attending to their horse and in general. Results from this study indicate that just over half (53.47%) of the 1036 respondents had rules/guidance designed to specifically reduce the risk of SARS-CoV-2 transmission on their yard. Where rules/guidance did exist, there was good compliance with 92.76% of respondents indicating that they were following them which is consistent with the general compliance findings of the UK COVID-19 Social Study [7].

The most common rule/guidance implemented by both owners and yard managers was social distancing (28.86% and 23.38% respectively), which was also the most common rule/guidance to be breached by horse owners (25.80%) when attending to their horse. This compliance breach was greater than the general compliance findings of the UK COVID-19 Social Study [7] which reported that only 8% of people were not maintaining the recommended distance from others.

Riding with others whilst at the yard (hacking or in an arena) and meeting up with non-household members (family and friends) when off the yard were also common rules/guidelines breached (16.12% and 53.33% respectively). This was again consistent with the general compliance findings of the UK COVID-19 Social Study [7] which reported that 24% were meeting up outside and 23% meeting up indoors.

Lack of compliance with wearing a facemask whilst on the yard (7.52%) was identical to the findings of the UK COVID-19 Social Study [7] (7%); whilst lack of compliance with hand washing (3.22%) and not isolating when required to (2.15%) were considerably lower than those reported by UK COVID-19 Social Study [7] of 45% and 13% respectively [7].

Respondents who kept their horses at either DIY livery, or on a private yard were most likely to breach rules/regulations both on (38.66 and 18.66% respectively) or off yard (33.33% and 33.33% respectively). Respondents who kept their horses at full livery were least likely to breach rules/regulations both on (5.33%) or off yard (0%).

Fifteen percent of respondents in this study reported that they were simply not following rules because they believed they were unnecessary.

5. Conclusions

Compliance of horse owners with COVID-19 rules/guidance when on and off their yard is high when rules/guidance exists. However, there is room for an increased contribution from the horse owning community by encouraging more yards to impose control measures where they currently don't exist and to improve the conditions which would permit less breaching of social distancing.

Social distancing, masks. We tried during first lockdown and it just didn't work at all. The yard is very much a diy yard and rundown with a lot of stallions. full livery then moved across the country (from North West	mask ing to socially distance and wear masks. Having 4 horses I'm often there for 2-3 hours, in cold conditions my nose runs constantly so cotton masks get soaked and the alternative is a J3 respirator which is almost dangerous to wear around my horses due to constantly getting hit in the face lol. E.g. around the hay nets we are all filling from the same bale with 80-90 horses on the yard so we are definitely closer than 2m. At Christmas time I hugged one of my friends, she was upset and crying. At the end of the day the distancing was taking such a major toll on mental health. We have also started one of my project horses together and probably come within 2m then too. Outside of the yard we adhere to all measures though so one could say she's a part of my 'bubble'.
